"Memories"

If one was fortunate enough to attend school when Reliance was beginning to come into being, he would have trudged each school day to that three room house in No. 1 and taken his seat along with the other pupils who lived in Reliance. Miss Chantry, the first teacher, would call the class to order and the Pledge to the Flag would be given. As pupils became more numerous two new teachers were called upon to aid her; namely, Mrs. William Cook and Mrs. J. L. Libby.

Reliance soon became listed among the thriving coal communities in this area, and naturally new teaching facilities had to be obtained to accommodate the new people who were continually moving in. Soon the little schoolhouse was abandoned, and pupils and teachers alike moved to the building which now houses Reliance Local Union 905.

But it seemed Reliance had not reached its full growth, for once again school materials were moved to a larger and more attractive white building situated on a hill overlooking the camp. This building is the one which long housed our grade school classes at Reliance. At that time it was used not only for educating the new citizens of this country, but also as a community church and a hall for other social functions.

Then came the eventful year when those who reached the eighth grade could ride the bus provided for taking them to Rock Springs to attend high school. You see, the only grades taught in Reliance were one through eight. Each lowly freshman would gaze upon his hero and bus driver, Donald Millar, as he drove the pupils to and from Rock Springs.

But in 1925 the buses ceased to run as sounds of sawing and hammering replaced the steady purr of the motor, because in that year the present high school building was constructed for the furthering of education, and in 1930 the gymnasium was completed to provide for the extra-curricular activities of the pupils.

Dr. O. C. Schwiering, now Dean of the College of Education at Wyoming University, was briefly engaged to act as superintendent of School District No. 7 as well as District No. 4 in Rock Springs. During the summer of 1925 he worked with the Union Pacific Engineering office in planning the present high school building and assisted in securing the necessary teachers for the following fall.

Much of the thanks and honor also go to those early pioneer board-members who included Charles Durham, Hugh Kelley and David Daniels. They chose a reliable and commendable man to guide the pupils as they attained their place in the world—Mr. Hanna, the first superintendent of Reliance High School.

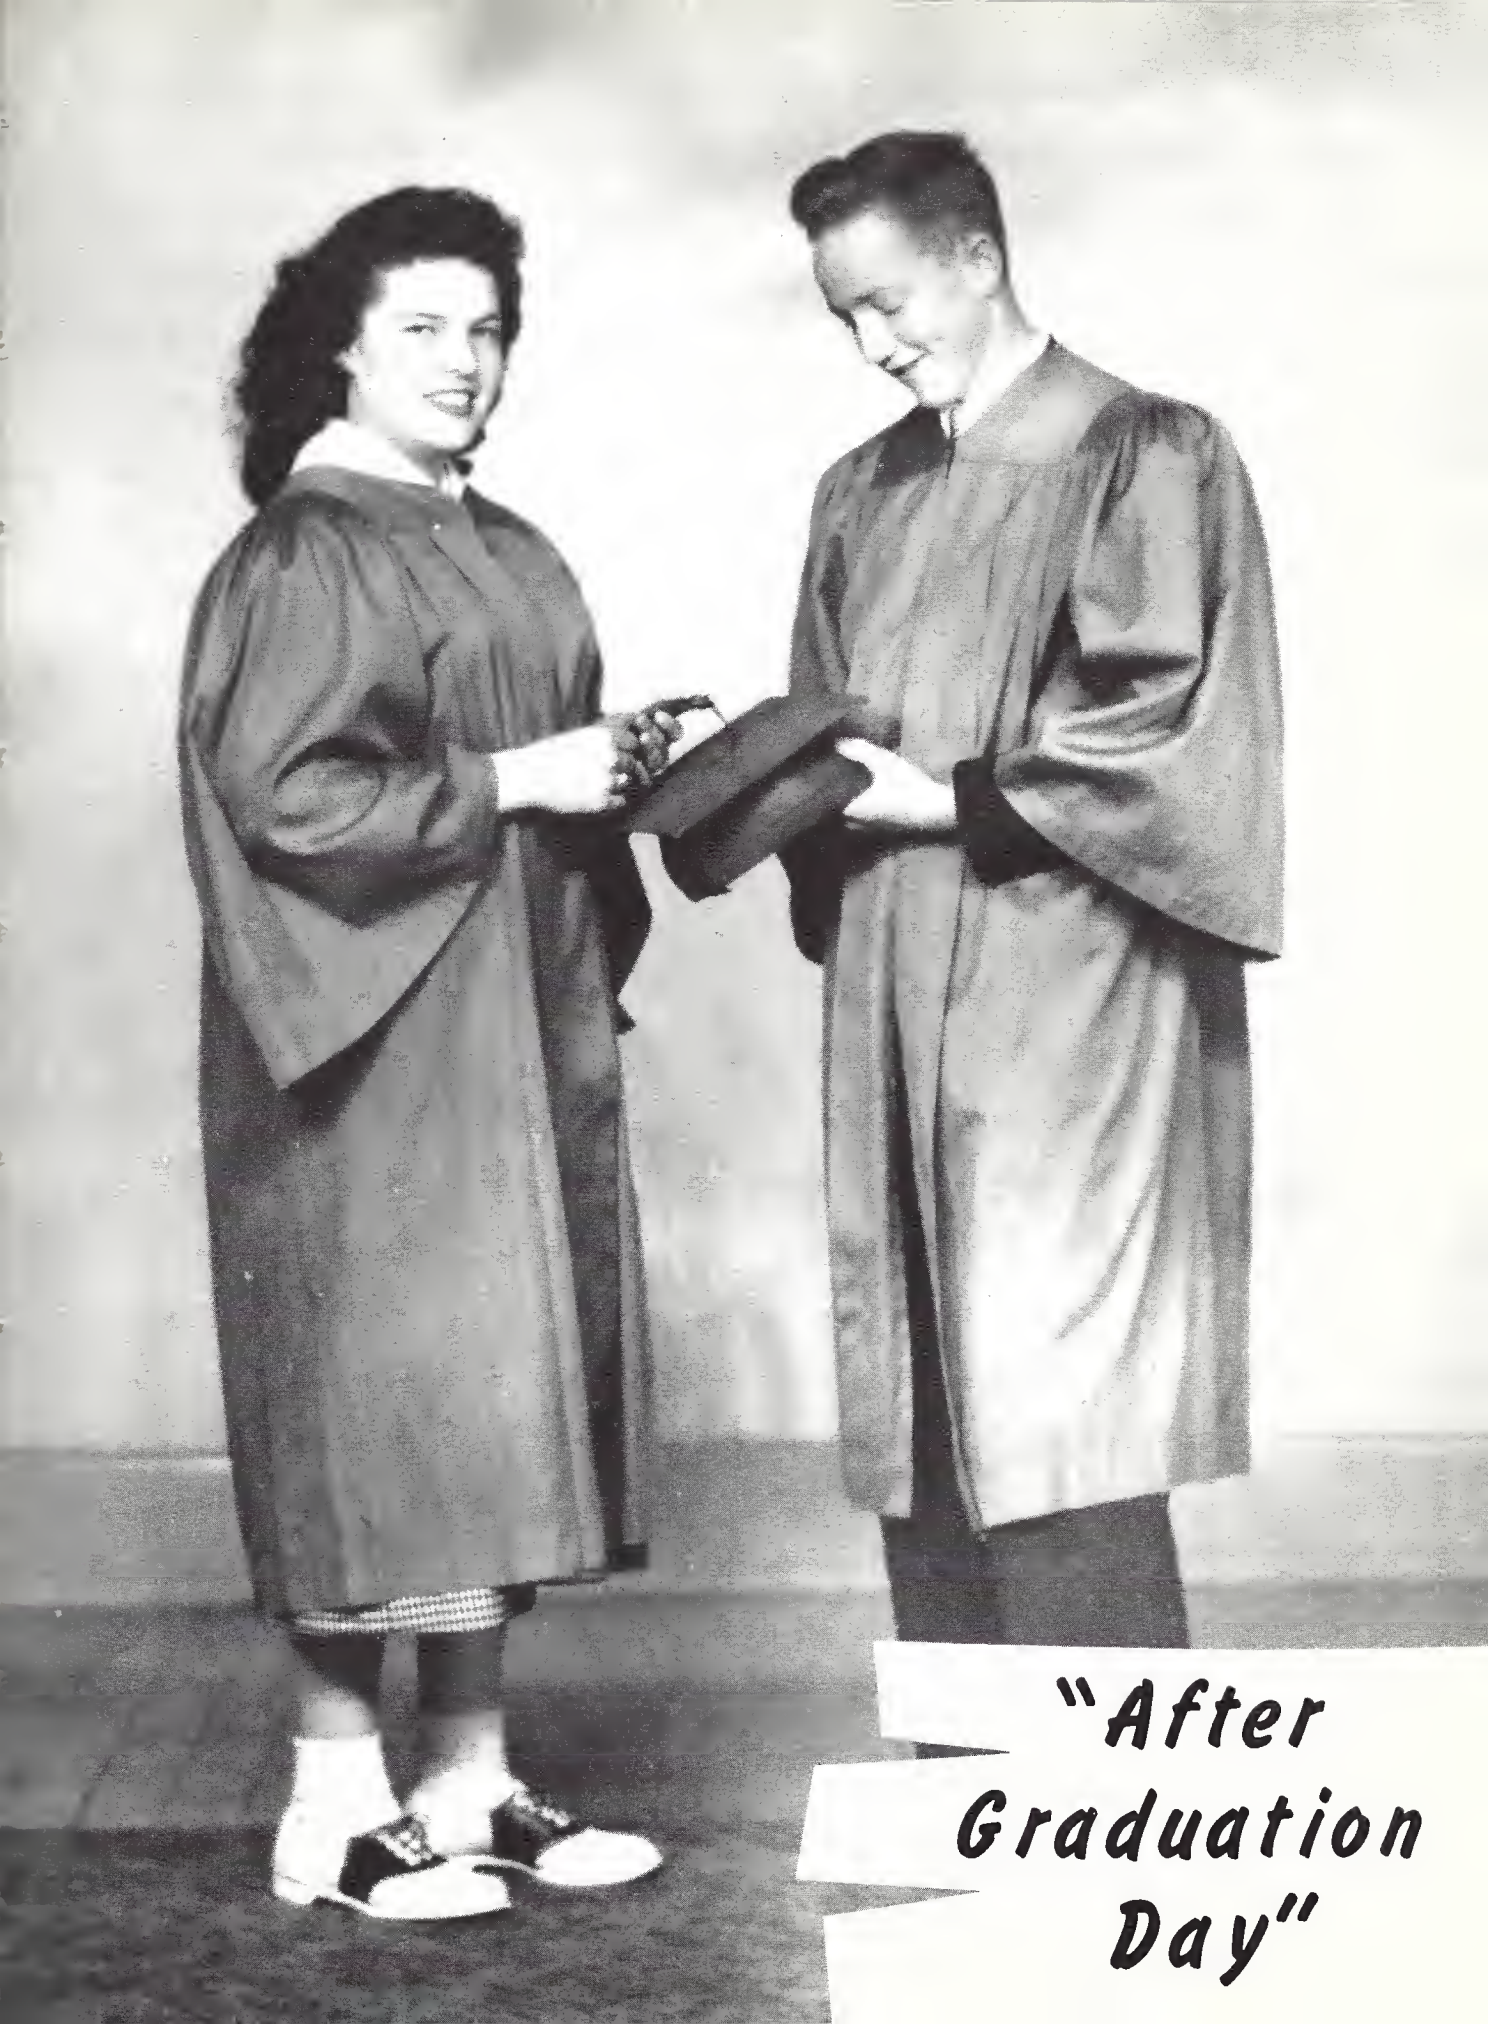

Other early superintendents included Mr. Busby, Mr. Martin and later Mr. Clyde Curtz, who was superintendent for eight years, and who now is superintendent at Evanston. Mr. C. V. Irvin then acted as superintendent for four years, being succeeded on May 8, 1945, by Mr. Ira J. Russell, the present superintendent.

From this early beginning, under the leadership of these superintendents, Reliance High School has attained an admirable record scholastically and athletically. Now a member of the North Central Association of Schools, RHS has an excellent school band, a modern hot-lunch program and educational departments that are commendable.

School District No. 7 has not lagged by the wayside recently, for this year a larger, modern grade school building was erected to replace the old white building.

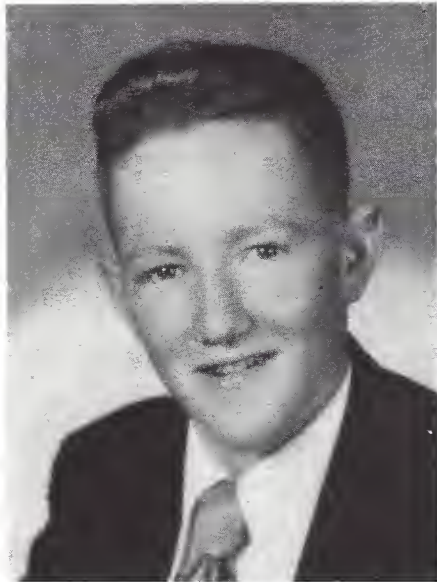

Yes, early life at RHS was the foundation of our present system, and much gratitude is due these people who made it possible for us to have this monument for teaching future world leaders.

Class History

Our '53 pirate crew drew up the anchor late in 1949, with 37 aboard. Being alert to the necessity of able leadership, we chose Elizabeth Strannigan and Donald Baker to lead us, assisted by Larry Welsh, Clayton Brown and Wilma Lowe. Mike Sawick and Ray Fortuna won honors at the junior high tournament at Evanston, as the frosh captured first place. Louise Thomas and Lois Mecca were chosen to represent our class as cheerleaders. At this point Gary Greenhalgh rejoined our ranks, and our first year of high school drew to a close.

As a three-month vacation ended, it found the remaining members of our crew eagerly awaiting coming events. Clayton Brown took on the duties of captain, assisted by Gary Greenhalgh and Ray Fortuna. We enjoyed "The Sunbonnet Girl", a musical comedy, FHA trips, and the yearly speech festival. Those following music courses achieved recognition at the Kemmerer music festival and the Green River and Jackson band concerts. Frieda Tryon joined our crew just before the Christmas cantata. Drawing up at Sophomore Island, Bill Mastrovich, Don Baker, Alex Perakis, Paul Chetterbock, Proctor Lescoe, Raymond Mathias, Louise Thomas and Laura Franc bade us farewell, and we sailed on.

Our junior year progressed even faster than expected. Larry Welsh assumed the duties of captain, aided by Elizabeth Strannigan and Beverly Welsh. Beverly Coet became a welcome addition to our number. The Junior Play, "Wanted a Hero", proved a smash hit. Football and basketball seasons passed very quickly, followed by the long-awaited arrival of our class rings. The climax of that year was the wonderful Junior Prom, "Dreamland", and our participation in Commencement Week by escorting the seniors of 1952 to their graduation. As the cruise ended, Ernie Fresques, Josephine Kragovich and George Goddard decided to leave the Pirate ship and to sail under other colors.

We set sail for Graduation Bay with a crew of twenty-four aboard, and with an exciting course charted. Sports was a leader for honors, as the football team tied for first in the district, and the basketball team enjoyed a successful season. The laughable Senior Play, "Every Family Has One", followed by the colorful Senior Hop, "Winter Wonderland", brought the first semester to a close. The last semester moved rapidly forward, with music and speech students preparing for their respective festivals. As the '53 pirate ship sailed into harbor on May 20, the triumphant strains of "Pomp and Circumstance" greeted those on board.

"Roman in the Gloamin"

The Junior Classical League enjoyed their banquet.

Oh to be a Roman!

Mr. Chadey's freshmen conducted November polling.

"Prophecy"

It is 1963. The alumni of the class of 1953 has gathered for its first class reunion.

Due to certain circumstances, two of the class members are discovered off stage while the program takes place. They are discussing their classmates.

As Superintendent Ira J. Russell gives the welcome address, one of the shy persons speaks to his companion.

"Say, Gary, it's really swell being here at old R. H. S. again, seeing our classmates. All of us have surely changed in a few years' time. Just look at you and me."

"Yeh, it seems kind of funny, doesn't it? Look at Phyllis Johnston over there. Why, I can remember how all of us used to tease her about how short she was. None of us ever dreamed she would be making $10,000 a month as a basketball star on one of the nation's leading teams. Or take Bill Palcher there. I never knew he was musically inclined. He did sing at a talent show once, but I didn't know it would help him to become a director of a Symphonic Orchestra."

"You never know, I always say. Myself, I always thought Lloyd Cabre was the quiet, homey type, but here he is one of the eligible young-men-about-town in old Chi. He came up in the world. But say, talk about people coming up in the world; did you know that J. R. While is a big railroad executive? He said it certainly pays to put your money on the rails."

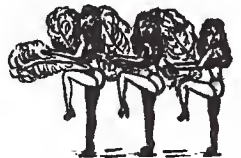

"He isn't the only one who has gone big-time. Look at Shirley Kalinowski and Jim Stroud. They were always sorta shy in school. Now they give nightly performances in Carnegie Hall as a ballet team. I saw them one night when I was up in the better part of town."

"Larry Welsh is the guy who surprised me. Who would ever have thought that he would be running a matrimonial agency? He was always sorta quiet around girls when we were in school."

"Yeh, and Dick Gibbs was the exact opposite. Now he's an astronomer at the Mt. Wilson Observatory and has no interest in anything but stars."

"Do you ever see Beverly Coet, Lois Mecca and Nila Franch in New York? I heard that they are Chorines in the Folies Bergère."

"No, can't say that I have, but I did see Brucilla Page on one of her trips to the Bowery when she was working on a case for the F. B. I. However, I didn't get to talk to her."

"Max Korfanta just got back from Europe in time for the reunion. He went to Paris to observe the latest in coiffures. He has his own hair styling shop on Fifth Avenue now. He and Chuck Tatman get to see each other quite often. Chuck has a dress shop down the street. They give each other a lot of business."

"Clayton Brown looks kinda tough now. I guess he has to be, though, to handle all the prisoners at Sing Sing. He's warden now. I thought maybe Jack Edwards would go into that kind of work."

"No, Jack is an opera star. He does quite a bit of studying abroad."

"Beverly Welsh and Wilma Lowe surprised me. I think Wilma told me she has five or six children. I thought Bev would be married by this time, too, but she told me that she writes the Lovelorn column in the San Francisco Examiner."

"What about Ray Fortuna and Mike Sawick? I thought they didn't like school, and here they are running a school for select young ladies."

"Elizabeth Strannigan is the one. I always knew she liked dogs, but I never knew she would run a Home for Stray Pets. I guess she liked them more than I thought."

"Well, Gary Greenhalgh, I guess everyone is satisfied. How about you?"

"I'm happy, Gene, I always did like to loaf, and the Bowery is a good place for it. Being a Bowery Bum isn't bad. I have plenty of time to sit and philosophize about the world. I might even find time to write a book on my observations. That takes brains. Never thought you would try tax evasion, though Eugene Wardlaw."

"Neither did I, but the government and I didn't see eye to eye on how much income tax I should pay. So I didn't pay it. Now I'm a parolee after being a guest of the state for tax evasion."

"Say, we'd better get back to listening to Mr. Russell, so we can leave with the rest of our class." ". . . and it is an honor having the class of '53 . . ."
